

The Giant AWAKENS.

Will the hurricane make landfall?

Will the volcano explode?

Will the residents need to be evacuated?

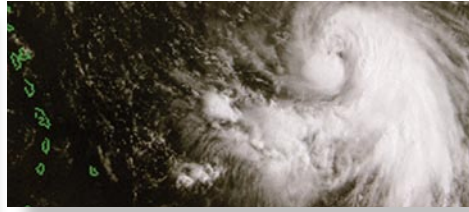

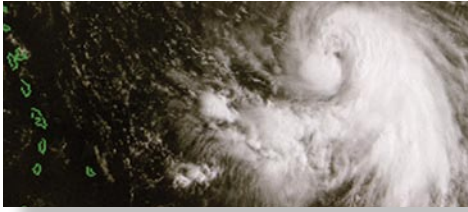

The giant awakens, and the skies darken as ash and soot rain down on a remote tropical island. The volcano--now a ticking time bomb--has come to life once again and the residents of Montserrat worry about their fate. To complicate matters, weather experts using satellite images have detected a hurricane looming off the shores of this Caribbean island. Montserrat is facing devastation.

As flaming pebbles and lava begin to pound the countryside, an emergency response team from your corporation assembles at a remote location to manage the crisis and assist Mission Control in assessing the situation, optimizing local resources, and saving lives.

With this medley of looming disasters, e-Mission Operation Montserrat is a powerful learning simulation that challenges corporate groups to apply teamwork to solve problems while facing an authentic crisis.

Is your team up to the challenge?

A Real-Life Simulation to Enhance Your Corporate Collaboration

The Corporate STAR, in partnership with the Challenger Learning Center at the Center for Educational Technologies at Wheeling Jesuit University, is pleased to bring you this powerful hands-on simulation. Operation Montserrat can stand alone as a single exercise or be integrated as a “drop-in” simulation for your professional development program. The main objective of Corporate STAR simulations is to enhance the effectiveness of your corporate training and organizational development program.

Operation Montserrat is perfect for addressing several key organizational issues: team development, working under stress, communication skills, decision making, problem-solving, critical thinking, leadership development, and resource management.

How To Position Your Mission

Operation Montserrat can be used with an intact work team or as an exercise to help people come together for the first time. The mission can also serve as a capstone event to help team members apply skills they have been developing for some time or simply to celebrate their ability to work together and get things done.

How We Support Your Mission

Corporate STAR missions are delivered and facilitated by organizational development practitioners who specialize in accelerated learning techniques. Our facilitators have the experience to make your mission enjoyable and relevant to what your team is learning. Our staff will take you through a pre-mission assessment to tailor your mission to your specific organizational needs. We also help your emergency response team members create their own personal implementation plans at the end of the mission.

Operation Montserrat is designed for groups between 12 and 24 people, so gather your team and help the people on this tiny island. Come and see what experiential learning is all about.

What Your Team Needs To Handle The Crisis

Operation Montserrat requires a large enough room to accommodate the four teams that make up the overall Emergency Response Team: Communications Team, Volcano Team, Hurricane Team, and Evacuation Team. Each team will use one flip chart with paper. Corporate STAR will provide mission handouts and work materials.

A Mission Of Learning – Together

The award-winning Operation Montserrat simulation was created by subject matter experts at the Center of Educational Technologies and is delivered by the professional staff of Corporate STAR and the Challenger Learning Center. This e-Mission represents the innovation and collaboration of several organizations dedicated to advancing corporate learning and professional development. Our mission is to provide your organization with the most current and creative tools to enhance personal and professional growth. Additionally, our work with other training specialists allows us to offer professional development curriculum that can be customized to suit your organizational needs.
